

REV. GEORGE L. CHANEY.

The Southern Superintendent of the Unitarian Church.

HIS VIEWS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS.

The Annexation of Hawaii The Logical Culmination of Events—The Industrial Awakening in the South. That Section not Impoverished as Many have Pronounced it—His Views of Orthodox Religion.

The INTELLIGENCER yesterday mentioned the presence in the city of Rev. George Leonard Chaney, late of Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Chaney is the superintendent of the Unitarian church in the south. His mission here, primarily, is to see if there is not an opening for a church of that denomination. He has had some correspondence with Rev. M. F. Dryden, whose modified theological views coincide very closely with the Unitarian tenets, and to this correspondence his presence is due.

Rev. Mr. Chaney succeeded the late Starr King as pastor of a leading Unitarian church in Boston, and remained there for fifteen years. In 1870 he went to the Sandwich Islands for a rest and vacation, and on his return established a church at Atlanta, Ga., of which he was for several years pastor. For the past season he has resided at Richmond, and made that his headquarters for the church work in the south. He is now on his way to Massachusetts, where he spends his summers, and which he still considers home.

Mr. Chaney has won some distinction as a lecturer. He has a lecture on "Pacific Isles and Shores," dealing largely with Hawaii—on which he has written a book—and Samoa, which is said to be very interesting, as it certainly is peculiarly timely. He also delivers a series of lectures on literary subjects. One of these, on "Whittier and Lanier," he has been solicited to deliver here this week, and he has expressed his willingness to do so if suitable arrangements can be made. He expects also to preach next Sunday, probably in the Odd Fellows' hall building. He is a fine talker, and should have a large audience.

HIS VIEWS OF RELIGION.

Just at this time, when there are so many evidences of unrest in the more orthodox churches, Unitarianism is receiving much attention. Mr. Chaney, in a conversation with an INTELLIGENCER man yesterday, said he did not seek to draw from other beliefs any who are content in them. If the church in which a man makes him a better man he wants to see him stay there. If he feels restless there, and does not subscribe to all its doctrines, then often the Unitarian church, when explained to him, offers something like his own views, although he did not before know the similarity. It is to this class, and to those who subscribe to no "orthodox" creed, that his church offers a resting place.

Speaking of the liberal church movement, Mr. Chaney said: "I think that the Bible, accepted in the light of reason and modern scientific research, does not lose much. The best of it, the spirit, is left. If the Presbyterian church, for instance, would give more freedom within its confines, I think it would assure a longer vitality. At the same time I can see that consistency required its action in the Briggs case. If I were that church I would leave the Westminster confession as a historical monument, and build something on a level with modern thought."

AS TO ANNEXATION.

Speaking of Hawaii, Mr. Chaney showed a strong predilection in favor of annexation to the United States. He said the union of the two countries was a natural outcome of events. The influential people of the islands are mainly descendants of American missionaries. The geographical position of the country makes it also a legitimate belonging of this nation. Mr. Chaney referred to the present operations of France in Siam, the constant activity of Russia in the east, and the jealousy with which the other powers regarded these. Africa, he said, had been already apportioned among the European powers, and just such a movement is there in its infancy as marked the early history of this continent. The policy of Europe is territorial aggrandizement. The powers have already swallowed nearly all the Pacific islands worth having, and the reason they regarded so passively the proposal to annex Hawaii to the United States, was that they already possessed islands much more important, geographically, than those; much more important in view of the completion of the Nicaragua canal.

"The main question to be considered," he said, "is what do the people of Hawaii want? While the foreign element predominates, there is a native population whose views it has been the custom to consult. When all is considered, I think annexation is the logical fate of the islands."

THE NEW SOUTH.

Mr. Chaney thinks the southern people have amply demonstrated that they have enterprise. They are not the languid race many people have considered them. The climate has not an enervating influence. He found a growing respect for skilled artisans, and a growing demand for industrial development. The south does not show the rush and bustle of the north, but that is because the season is longer, and there is no occasion for the haste which the New England climate, for instance, demands. People lose sight of the fact that more deliberate work in the longer southern season will produce as rich results as the activity and rush of the north in a shorter season.

Manual education is needed in the south, and he has lent his influence to encourage it. Prosperous factories have increased in number, and he expects to see before long the south supply the world with the coarsest cotton goods. What is most needed is skill of labor and economy of administration. The south is not a poor country. The wealth is there. It is not in the same hands as before the war, but it is more evenly distributed. Some who were rich are rich no longer, but the country has not depreciated in wealth.

Mr. Chaney will remain in Wheeling throughout the week. Nobody who can hear his lecture or his sermon should fail to do so, for he will be found both instructive and entertaining in the highest sense.

Serious Results of a Corn.

Major Samuel Brubaker returned yesterday from Mount Clemens, where he has been enjoying his summer vacation. For some time past Mr. Brubaker has been suffering from a very sore foot, caused by a corn which has persistently refused to be cured by all means known to chiropodists. He left Mount Clemens to take in the World's Fair before returning home, but an accident to the toe caused it to become troublesome and an ugly sore rendered it impossible for him to walk with any comfort, and he was obliged to return to Wheeling without visiting the fair. The toe has grown rapidly worse, and it is now thought that amputation will be necessary.

Baltimore Cattle Market.

UNION STOCK YARDS, CLAREMONT, MONDAY, July 24, 1893.

Swine.—Trade in hogs this week is only fair, not active with values some 25 cents off from those ruling last week. The receipts, numbering some 1,450 head less than those recorded last week, are about equal to the needs of the butchers, values being reported easier. Fair to best western light hogs range at $6.00 to $7.00 per 100 lbs. fair to best western heavy hogs at $5.25 to $6.00 per 100 lbs. gross, and roughs at $5.00 to $5.25 per 100 lbs. gross. Receipts of hogs this week 8,525.

Sheep and Lambs.—Trade is only fair for rough sheep and lambs, but exceedingly dull for rough stock, as dealers are "trading" stuff, there being only too many of them on the market. We quote sheep at 25 cents per lb. gross, and lambs at 35 cents, and a few extra at 35 cents per lb. gross.

AN EXCITING CHASE.

After a Thief Out in the Country—He is in Jail.

Yesterday morning a thief entered the house of Malcolm Lowry, at Edgington lane. He was discovered, and Noah Zane, jr., caught him, but he broke away. After an exciting chase he eluded his pursuers. A little later Constable John Anderson saw the man in an Elm Grove car and attempted to capture him, but he broke away and ran, and a shot or two fired after him merely accelerated his speed. After a long chase, Young Zane again came up with him and captured him. He was turned over to Constable Anderson, brought to town and lodged in jail. Squire Arkle examined him. He gave his name as Jack Smith. He was held in $500 bail for a hearing to-day.
